

To download this file, simply select "SAVE AS" from the "FILE" menu in your browser and follow the instructions.

The Eternal Now

February 27, 2010

Charles E. Newbold, Jr.

Days spin by
as if they were a ball
tethered to a line
gaining momentum
as it reaches the end
fully wrapped around a pole.
Yet, it matters not because my life
is tethered to that of another beyond time.
A life that is linear without end.
It does not spin
onward toward an end.
That life is within me.
life that sustains me.
life that transcends time.
God's kind of life.
Life eternal.
So, it matters not
that the days go flying by
with increased velocity toward a rapid end.
I see myself not bound to that ball
but as one standing by looking beyond
living above
passing through yet, standing still
as one who has already arrived.
Thank you, Jesus.
For you have given me
this precious God-kind of life
—the eternal now.